

Establishing a Strong Support System

Suggested timeframe of completion: March 1 – May 1

Whether you're headed off to college, boot camp or your first day on a new job you may experience moments where you feel overwhelmed by change. Knowing the support systems that exist at your workplace or college as well as in your local community can help you develop a reliable support system that genuinely cares about you and wants to help you succeed. These resources are more important than you could possibly imagine.

Locate the section that corresponds to where you're going next and start building your list of support systems today.
